Short necklaces and chokers remain as present on the podiums. In the case of rigid necklaces, chains, stones, crystals and metals dominate the scene. We can also see materials such as leather, chain mail and plastic. These jewelry pieces exude confidence and assertiveness. They can at times be sober or extravagant, depending on the beader's tastes

Lavalier necklaces impose themselves this season. Do you have yours? In addition to elongating your silhouette, the lavalier necklace can be easily worn with any outfit. Most of them are made of beads and are usually ended with a tassel made from textile fibers. However, lavalier necklaces made of metals and stones are still in. Some are very short, like chokers, while others are very long and fall past the waist. Mâlâs (Buddhist or Hindu rosary) that are often seen, support this trend. For more fantasy, add a touch of color with a colored tassel.

Simple and effective! The recipe? A chain ornamented with a pendant or a fixe central element. An eternal piece that will never go out of fashion! The simple structure of this type of necklaces makes them come back again and again on the fashion hit lists. It adapts to changing seasons and new trends. For this type of necklaces, chains are in general very thin and sober to leave place for pendants or central pieces. Many are made of metal and/or stones. However, we can see variants such as pendants on leather cord or ribbon. Simply adapt it to the trend of your choice.

Once more, the torque necklace keeps its spot in the crazy run for trends. Some torque necklaces are very sober while others are more elaborate and resemble a bib necklace. This season, once more, the torque necklace's opening can be worn in the front or back of the neck. What materials are they made with? Since the torque is a rigid necklace, metal is at the honor. For a trendier effect, opt for gold. To vary, add a pendant, stones or textile fibers.

We never tire of bib necklaces, which are still present in the designers' collections this season. Metals, stones, chains, beads, ribbon and synthetic materials are all invited to creators' workshops. What style to choose? Opt for a vintage look, contemporary, ethnic or minimalist. Some bibs have a rigid structure but most are flexible and fit very snugly to the thorax. A bib necklace that covers the chest might tempt those with a soft spot for voluminous jewelry.

How can we ever tire of those necklaces that catch the eyes! They are chic yet fussy and shiny. Made of stones, crystals, various beads, chains, studs and tassels, they are generally showy. Rare multi-row necklaces are for the most part found in this category. Wear them to fill your neckline or over the collar of your outfit.

Sautoirs

Sautoir necklaces remain a classic but are becoming rare. Generally, we can find them under a more sober aspect, a single row of chain or cord decorated with stones. These decorated elements are arranged towards the middle of the sautoir or again arranged in a symmetrical fashion or not. The most valued materials are golden or silver metal, cream or white pearls, cords, stones and beads. Some will opt for very long sautoir with which one can make more than one lap around the neck.

This season's earrings are very colorful and varied in length. We find studs, creoles, chandelier and very long earrings. The trend of earrings that mould the ear is still in. Indeed, we see earrings that cover a part of the ear's lobe and even some that go all the way up to the tip of the ear. In fashion shows, the new trend is the lonely earring. Worn alone on one side, it will often be longer or fluffier, to fill in the void of the missing second earring. We can see many earrings with their back part being an integral part of the earring and being part of the design of the jewel.

On the side of bracelets, we prioritize rigid bracelets such as cuffs and bangles. However, the cuff bracelet is the one we see the most on the podiums. The opening of the bracelet can be worn on top or under the wrist. Some are thin and delicate and others are massive and/or garnished with stones. There are also many flexible bracelets with clasp (traditional bracelet type). The popular materials are metal, stones, and chain. We also see leather and fur as well as synthetic fabrics and beads. Some designers are still making handlets (hand bracelets linked to a ring) this season.

On the rings' side, there are a lot of varieties. The trend is to open ring (like cuff bracelets), multi finger rings, band and traditional rings (ring ornamented with a decorative element on top). In many collections, we can see rings with a pointy top as well as rings with an oval decorative element. Stones, pearls and metals are still the most popular materials when talking about rings. For more fantasy, opt for synthetic materials, natural wood, lacquer and resin.

Vintage jewelry continues to bedazzle us and remind us of jewels seen in our childhood's favorite fairy tales. Yes! Vintage jewelry definitely still has its place in our jewelry boxes. We get our inspiration from the wealth of vintage jewelry, the 20's, Renaissance, Baroque and Victorian styles and we integrate marquise shaped stones, buckles, antique keys, pearls, stones, crystals, tassels and medals.

Flora is often an endless source of inspiration for the arts and crafts. This season is no exception to this rule and has its shares of nature inspired jewelry. Foliage and flowers are a "must" this season. They garnish and embellish necklaces, rings, bracelets, earrings and brooches. Vine leaves are seen in the collections of Alexander McQueen and Ben-Amun, whereas flowers are seen at Dolce & Gabbana as well as at Oscar de la Renta.

Sharp jewelry pieces are still in. Points, studs, arrows, herringbones and sharp pieces of all kind are still omnipresent. What's the difference this season? Triangles, so present last season left their place to a variety spikes and points. They are still present, however, more subtle than last season. This season, sharp jewelry is mainly made of metal and stones.

Regardless of the subject, we sprinkle our jewelry with figurative elements of our choice. Indeed, we can find several jewelry pieces decorated with charms, pendants or elements with shapes that represent something real such as objects or human body parts (mouth, eye). We can also find keys, boats, arrows, wings, firearms, gears, padlocks, letters, characters, moons and stars. Let your imagination run wild!

Fringes and tassels do not just decorate jewelry this time, they make the jewelry! They become the subject and the inspiration. If you have not adopted these components yet, now is the time! They add length and movement to this season's jewelry pieces. We can find them in many different types of jewelry pieces; rings, earrings, necklaces, bracelets, and brooches. This season's tassels are mainly made of textile fibers, chains, seed beads and leather. Fringes are made of metal rods, chain, crystal chains or rows of pearls. Opt for a length that suits you, since we find them in lengths that range from very short to very long.

Stones and crystals abound and overwhelm our collections. It shines from everywhere! Gemstones and crystals, all mix up to make you shine! Crystal pavés are also in, just like raw stones. Stones and crystals mix with all trends and styles, you cannot be wrong by choosing them. For more fantasy, opt for colorful stones that are showy, such as poppy yellow, aqua, pink, red, blue and green.

Gold colored metal is at the honor this season, even though silver, black, bronze and rose gold (pink gold or pinkish copper) metals are also present. The "Alloy" trend from last season that consisted of mixing various metals in one jewelry piece is also present, but definitely less than before. The duos we see are gold and black, pink gold and black and silver and gold. We can also see some lacquered metals in vivid colors, such as blue, yellow, orange and red.

The most popular chains types are curb chains and snake chains, which we also find it in a flat shape. The colors to prioritize are gold and silver, although we can see chains in shades of pink gold and metallic black. The crystal chain is not as present as during the previous seasons, but we see it from time to time. For more fantasy, opt for colorful plastic links.

The presence of leather can be felt this season. We can see it on bracelets at Fendi, on chokers at Dsquared2 and Lanvin, as bracelets at Fendi and even as a bib necklace at Louis Vuitton. We find it more often in shades of black and brown, although we can find it under green or blue leather. Under which shape can we find it? It is found as bands, as cords, studded, riveted and it can cover the whole jewel or be sewn on it. For those who prefer animal patterns, snake leather and alligator leather are those to get.

The components Beads

Beads keep decorating our jewelry pieces. They add a touch of handmade warmth to jewelry pieces. Many jewelry pieces are woven, notably at Givenchy and Vivienne Westwood. Otherwise, beads often compose tassels, necklaces and bracelets. We see many of them in lavalier necklaces and mâlâs (Buddhist or Hindu rosary). What beads are we choosing? Well, we find semi-precious stones, glass, metal, plastic and wood beads as well as pearls and seed beads.

Lanvin

Textiles fibers add a touch of softness to jewels of a few collections. It is greatly due to the popularity of tassels that we find so many textiles in collections, but we can also find textiles as ribbons, cords, threads, knotting, braiding or wrapping. The most popular colors are red, blue, purple and black.

Synthetic materials are present in many collections. They are not as present as classical materials such as stones, crystals, metals and pearls, but they still deserve their place on the hit list of the trendiest components. Here, it's the less traditional materials such as plastics and resins that are used to give a more contemporary look to jewels.

What are the trendy colors this season?

Well, inevitably, BLACK and WHITE. Then, in order of importance, GREYS, GREENS, BLUES, REDS, BROWNS and BEIGES, as well as PURPLISH SHADES.

Grey

Greys are unavoidable this season! They are mainly presented under the shades of steel, brownish and slate, but neutral grey, anthracite, iron, lead, clay and oatmeal. They can be found matched with black, white, soft purple, beige and sometimes more vivid colors such as yellow, blue, red and pink.
